Christian Employers Alliance Applauds Court’s Ruling on Dobbs; Encourages Peers to Step into Gap

Washington, D.C. — “We are grateful for the final delivery of this important ruling on Dobbs v. Jackson Women’s Health,” said CEA President Shannon Royce, J.D., “returning the pivotal issue of abortion back to the states and to the people. While there have been significant theatrics and intensified media coverage in recent weeks, the day-to-day reality in our communities remains the same: The unborn need protection and their mothers need help and hope. Now, more than ever, people of good faith must continue to save the lives of babies and serve their mothers. We can love them both.”

Christian businesses and leaders continue to step into the gap left by a decaying culture. From supporting local pregnancy care centers, to employing single mothers, to coming alongside local churches as they minister to the well-being of mother, father, and child, they are positively impacting lives, quietly and unceremoniously.

Royce went on to add, “We urge Christian business leaders to continue to engage in the work of their local pregnancy care centers through financial and practical supports, and to stand for life in their state legislatures. While society actively seeks the destruction of life, Christians are uniquely equipped to share God’s life-affirming message of hope and healing to all.”
